

H. G. Wells

The Time Machine

By H. G. Wells (1886-1946)

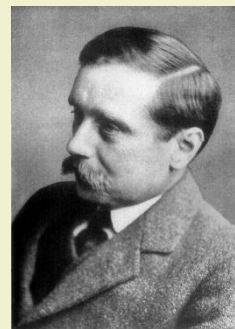

Surely the Time Traveler threw great dinner parties! His guests were treated to a once-in-forever trial of a miniature time machine - an exquisite miniature that acted so flawlessly as to appear to be stage magic. That his guests did not believe the explanation - the machine vanished into the mists of the future - was patent. Still, a couple of the more thoughtful had reservations about branding the demonstration an outright trickery. And what about the nearly-complete full-size Machine in the Traveler's laboratory?

Believe, or disbelieve? But perhaps the inventive genius of a man who can translate "thousands of millions of days" of time travel into an exact date should not be doubted! (Intro by Mark F. Smith)

Read by Mark F Smith; total running time: 03:339:09. In addition to the reader, this audio book was produced by Hugh Gillis (dedicated proof-listener) and TriciaG (meta-coordinator & cataloging).

This recording is in the public domain and may be reproduced, distributed, or modified without permission. For more information or to volunteer, visit librivox.org. Cover image by Leonardo da Vinci (d. 1519). Author picture taken pre-1922. Copyright expired in U.S., Canada, EU, and all countries with author's life +70 yrs laws. Cover design by Janette Brown. This design is in the public domain.

The Time Machine

The Time Machine

H. G. Wells